

BATTALION CHIEF HURT, 200 PERSONS IN PERIL AT FIRE

Families Driven From Homes
by $75,000 Flames in East
126th St. Warehouse.

Acting Battalion Chief Charles W. Rankin, Chief Kenlon's assistant, received a fractured leg during the fire in the five-story Royal Storge Warehouse, No. 159 East 126th Street, early to-day.

Battalion Chief Rankin delivered Chief Kenlon's orders to subordinates at the fire. He had been in the burning building and was descending the front stoop when a cascade of water pouring out of the door swept him from his feet and caused the fracture. His left leg was weak from an injury sustained three years ago at a fire. He is an honor man of the department, having distinguished himself particularly at the Equitable fire.

The fire in the warehouse started at 6 A. M. on the third floor. Policeman John Conway aroused the families in the five-story house, No. 165, next door, and carried to the street Mrs. Mary Fisher, sixty years old, an invalid. The tenants in Nos. 164 and 166 East 127th Street, in the rear, also were ordered to the street. More than 200 persons thus driven out sought refuge in restaurants and stores in Third Avenue.

An elevator shaft in the warehouse carried the flames through the building so quickly three alarms were sounded. The surface cars on Third and Lexington Avenues were stopped for two hours and the Third Avenue "L" trains had to carry their loads of rush hour workers through a cloud of smoke. The flames were confined to the one building, doing damage estimated at $75,000.

"BELGIAN JACK," HERO OF RAINBOW DIVISION, IS LOST

Water Spaniel, Gassed Twice, Wandered Out of Office in Putnam Building.

This is the tale of a dog, one of the war's real heroes. His name is "Belgian Jack." He's a bob-tailed water spaniel, shaved from the shoulders down, about five years old and weighing nearly twenty-five pounds. His owner, Freeman Bernstein, the theatrical agent, in the Putnam Building, Broadway and 43d Street, is doing everything in his power to locate him.

As the dog has been gassed twice Bernstein thinks that he may have lost his mind.

"Belgian Jack" was found on the battlefield at Cheppe, France, June 29, 1918, by Private Joseph Bent of Company A, 117th Supply Train. The dog went through all the trying battles with the Rainbow Division until the end of the war, and was "on guard" at the body of a dead French soldier when found.

The only thing Bernstein has to remind him of the hero is a khaki blanket, which bears two wound stripes, and the insignia of the Rainbow Division and the Army of Occupation. Bernstein says he paid Private Kent $250 for Jack, and will pay a good reward for the dog's recovery.

Pertaining to a June Bride

We don't feel ourselves in a position to rave about the beatific state of "being engaged"—that is the bride's privilege. But if one more drop of happiness were needed to make her full cup overflowing, we feel that we can supply it—though in a material way—in the form of lovely clothes to grace the occasion, and the occasions thereafter. For could even a bride-to-be tread paths so high above the clouds as not to realize the part that clothes play in the chain of great events?

the flower girl and the page

To them it is the "thrill that comes once in a lifetime" to be fussed up and allowed to appear at a wedding. To the wedding they lend the charm that only children give. These little clothes will make them more lively still—if that were possible.

If the Flower Girl is between 6 and 10 she might wear a frock of flesh or white Georgette Crepe in Empire style with a little surplice fichu collar. Picot edged ruffles trim the skirt, the collar and the short sleeves. $10.75

If she is 3 to 5, she would be just dear in a white net frock trimmed with dainty Val lace. It is over a lace trimmed slip of white China silk. Little touches of hand smocking trim the square neck, and there's a lovely sash girle of pink or blue satin. $19.79

Another Organdie Frock for a little youngster of 4 or 5 years is fashioned without a waistline. It just has a square collar of embroidered organdie with two-tone lavender satin ribbon threaded through. $14.49

And now for the Page—there is the cutest suit with black satin knickers and Eton jacket, and white satin blouse with little pleated frills trimming the front, the Eton collar and cuffs. Size 4 to 7 years. $14.74

the bridal gown

is the outward manifestation of cherished hopes realized. It should be worthy of all the beforehand planning and all the afterward memories that cling about a thing so full of sentiment. In the Women's Dress Section you will find gowns symbolic of all they are meant to express—gowns of gleaming white satin, trimmed with fine laces, orange blossoms and pearls—gowns that seem conscious of the importance of the part they are to play.

Three Tiers of fine Silk Lace cover the skirt of a white satin gown that has a long square train suspended from the shoulders. A spray of orange blossom nestles in the crushed girle at the waistline. $74.75

Exquisite Pearl Trimming is the only adornment to be found on a white satin gown that is draped artistically. The only part of the dress that shows no draping is the train, a single long panel, starting at the shoulders and trailing freely. $79.75

White Satin Slippers, $5.84.

For a Simple, At-Home Wedding, a bride might wear a dear white satin frock with a little cape of tulle flying away at the shoulders, adorned with "daisies" of uncut fringe. The fringe, upstanding, trims satin bands on the skirt. $48.75

The Veil should be Real Lace. The "crown" that is fit to crown a bride should be of Lierre or Princess lace. Those of Lierre lace are priced $4.89 to $7.49; those of Princess lace are $9.49 to $38.25.

For the Groom—"the conventional black"

The faultlessly fitting cutaway coat, the striped trousers, the snowy shirt, the correct tie, the shoes, the silk hose, and all that goes to make him a symphony in black and white. Boxes of ties and gloves, too, for the groom to send to his groomsmen.

a bride's trousseau

We speak of her personal trousseau here—her lingerie. Those cherished bits of intimate apparel that are worn beneath the bridal gown, and afterwards repose on top of all the other things in her dresser drawer, can hardly be too fine. These sets consist of nightgown and envelope chemise.

White Satin, gleaming ivory white satin is used in this lovely set. The gown is trimmed with wide Val lace and insertion at the square neck and tiny cap sleeves; large splash bows of satin ribbon add a final bit of loveliness.

Gown, $24.75; tax, $1.98; total, $26.73.

Envelope Chemise, $10.79; tax, $1.18; total, $11.97.

White Georgette Crepe, because of the loveliness of the fabric itself is very simply trimmed in this bridal set. The top is surplice fashion inset with bands of narrow Val lace and finished with small flat tailored bows. The lower parts of both gown and chemise are accordion pleated.

Gown, $19.79; tax, $1.48; total, $21.27.

Envelope Chemise, $10.79; tax, $1.18; total, $11.97.

White Crepe de Chine makes an exquisite bridal set. The tops of both gown and chemise are of Georgette crepe, inset with Val lace insertions and artistic little medallions. Rows of little love-knots, with long streamers form the dainty and symbolic trimming.

Gown, $26.79; tax, $2.18; total, $28.97.

Envelope Chemise, $19.79; tax, $1.48; total, $21.27.

Store—Third Floor, Rear.

her going away clothes

need not be many in number, but they should be excellent in quality and unquestionably appropriate. We could suggest countless things for wardrobes of varying size, but every going-away wardrobe does need a traveling suit, a sport suit and a dinner gown.

The Traveling Suit—What could be more appropriate than one of navy tricotine that fastens right up at the neck and ends in a smart little turn-over collar. Embroidered bands of the tricotine go over the shoulders, thread through at the sides and form loose tabs. Cut crystal beads form a novel trimming at the edges of the front and sleeves. $89.75.

An Exquisite Dinner Gown is of chiffon in the new and wonderful shade of "nephrite" green. It is embroidered with glass beads in an artistic design so effectively that it needs no other form of trimming. The neck is round and collarless, the sleeves are short. $139.00.

The Sport Suit—one that would be appropriate for golf, for walking in the country, for motoring or for the sport of being smart is of chamalla cloth, blue, gray, or tan. The "coat" is a slip-over blouse affair with sailor collar and turn-up cuff bottom. A nonchalant plaid silk tie slips through a knot of the self material. $39.75.

Store—Third Floor, 34th Street, Rear.
